News, Opinion, and Research

Canadian students are excelling: Don't get complacent

Canadians can be proud of our showing in the 2015 Programme for International Student Assessment report. We are one of only a handful of countries that places in the top tier in the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development in each of the three subjects tested: science, reading and math...Read more

Which toys work best for supporting interactions with your child?

At the Hanen Centre, we encourage parents to involve their children in meaningful, positive interactions throughout their day. Have you ever noticed, though, that some toys make it harder to get an interaction going with your child than others?...Read more

Which qualities of early childcare programs help parents and kids succeed?

If you got 13 percent back on your investments every year, you'd be pretty happy, right? Remember, the S&P 500, historically, has averaged about 7 percent when adjusted for inflation. What if the investment is in children, and the return on investment not only makes economic sense but results in richer, fuller, healthier lives for the entire family?...Read more

Dinner...at the library?

An estimated 500,000 Philadelphians, including 25 percent of black residents, lack some sort of basic literacy. This affects them in any number of ways - some can't fill out work applications, others can't balance a checkbook, still more can't properly use a computer or type at a reasonable rate. Now the library has taken on another, less expected, form of literacy: nutritional...Read more
