Canada's new Skills for Success:

Are skills everyone needs to participate and thrive in learning, work, & life.

Overlap & interact with each other and with technical & life skills.

Include skills needed for building knowledge & other skills

Include literacy/numeracy skills & soft, social-emotional skills.

Are teachable, learnable, repeatable, observable, & assessable.

Can be adapted and transferred to different contexts in life.

The Bottom Line

The skills required by human beings to be able to survive, to develop their full capacities, to live and work in dignity, to participate fully in development, to improve the quality of their lives, to make informed decisions, and to continue learning.

-Education for All

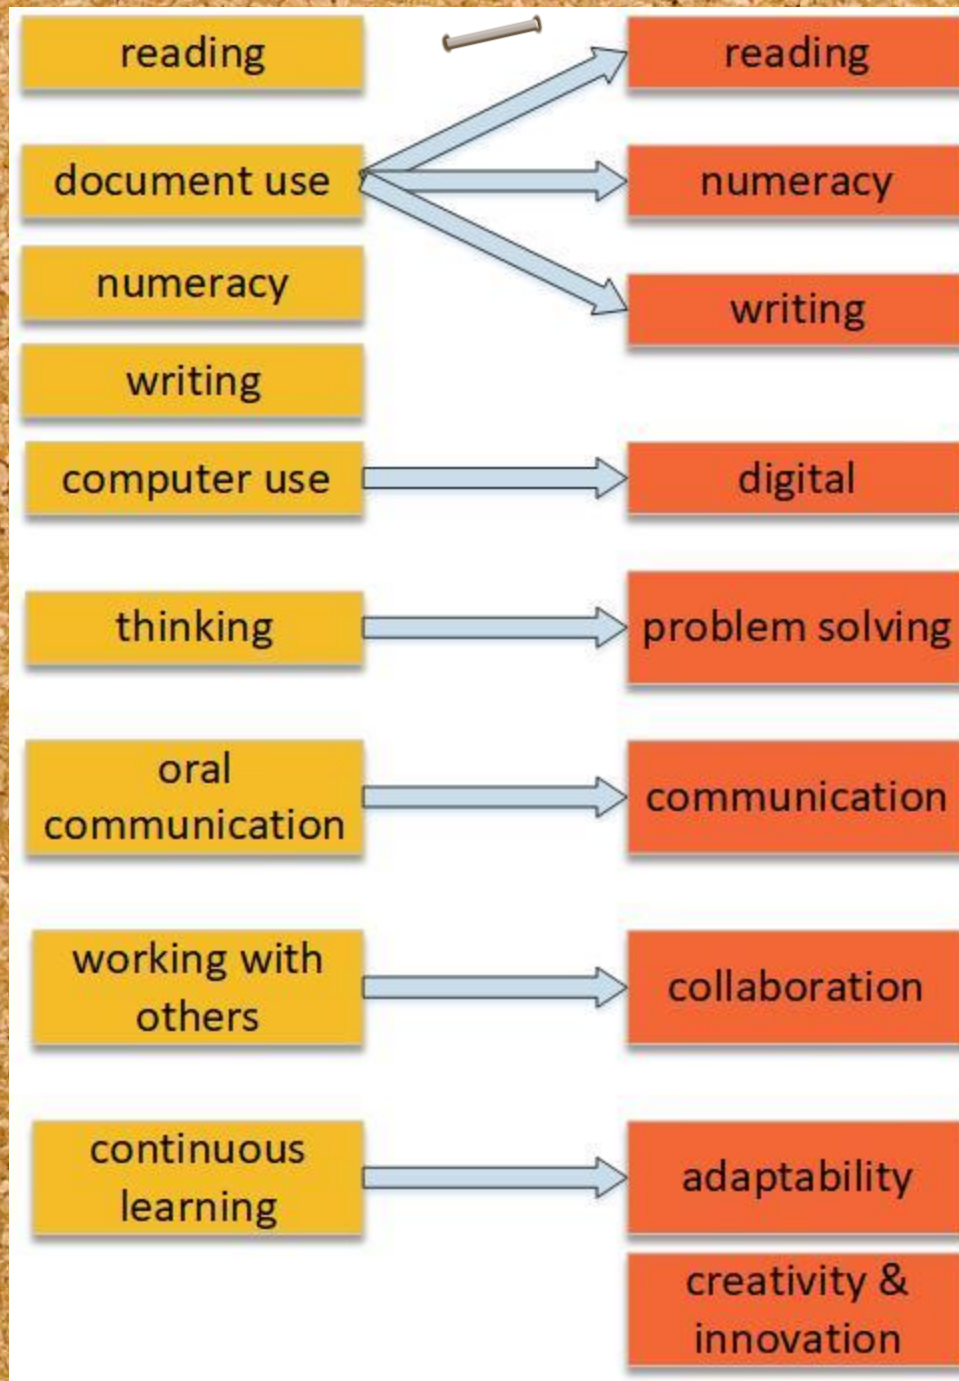

Skills for Success are the foundation of democracy. They also help mitigate the challenges posed by our changing world context.

Skills that empower individuals to manage their lives in meaningful and responsible ways by exercising control over their living and working.

A word of caution...

The Skills for Success proficiency descriptors are not final versions. Changes will be made by the Government of Canada over the next few years, especially for the new 3-level scales.

Skill Components

Each skill is broken down into six components that describe the skill.

Components show the processes or behaviours that make up the skill.

Components follow a general format that includes: identify, understand, plan, act, reflect (or something similar).

Each component is described in detail on the Skills for Success website.

Components can be used to design training programs and learning materials.

Components provide guidance on what to assess in Skills for Success programs.

What about including an Indigenous Skills Perspective?

Contributing to the sustainability of Indigenous culture (e.g., language, knowledge, beliefs, practices, laws, customs, arts, identity).

Supporting the well-being of the self, the family, the community, the land, the spirits, and the ancestors.

8 ways to develop Indigenous Cultural Competence

- ♦ Learning through narrative.
- ♦ Planning and visualising explicit processes.
- ♦ Working non-verbally with self-reflective, hands-on methods.
- ♦ Learning through images, symbols, and metaphors.
- ♦ Learning through place-responsive, environmental practice.
- ♦ Using indirect, innovative, and interdisciplinary approaches.
- ♦ Modelling and scaffolding by working from wholes to parts.
- ♦ Connecting learning to local values, needs, and knowledge

That's All
Folks.
